

Emily is a faculty member in the First-Year Studies and Mathematics program at Stockton University. She teaches various levels of introductory mathematics as well as an in-depth financial literacy course she created, Mathematics of Money. At Stockton, Emily currently serves as the Quantitative Reasoning Across Disciplines (QUAD) Convenor, the First-Year Studies Peer Mentor Program Co-Coordinator, and Dual-Credit Coach for the Survey of Mathematics Dual-Credit course at Mainland Regional High School, Egg Harbor Township High School, and Holy Spirit High School. Emily also serves as a member of the Open-Textbook and Education Resource committee, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)-504 Steering Committee, and as a mentor to adjunct faculty.

Community service is very important to Emily and her family. Emily has been a member of the Linwood Education Foundation (LEF) for the past 6 years, most recently serving as treasurer. LEF works with businesses and individuals in the community to raise money each year to fund educational grants that directly benefit Linwood students. Emily also participated in the past two strategic planning sessions for Linwood Schools. Her husband, Tug, volunteers for Linwood Baseball Association and Mainland United Recreation Association (MUSA) and currently serves as MUSA's Director of Recreation Soccer.

Emily grew up in Bucks County, PA, went to The College of New Jersey for her undergraduate degree in Mathematics and Secondary Education and Rutgers University for graduate school in Counseling Psychology. She currently lives in Linwood with her husband, Tug, their three children, James, Kyle, and Chase, and their dog, Chloe. Emily and her family love spending time with extended family and friends, enjoying the outdoors, watching tv, and generally looking for the fun in life.
