

Born and raised in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, Casey grew up attending a small K-8 community school much like the schools in Linwood. After graduating from Strath Haven High School, Casey attended Rider University where she majored in Elementary Education and English Writing. After securing her full time teaching position, Casey attended graduate school at Widener University where she obtained her Master's in Reading Education with a Reading Specialist certification.

A beach girl at heart, Casey moved to the Jersey shore and has been employed by the Egg Harbor Township School District since the Fall of 2000. She started as a Fifth grade teacher and in 2014, became a Reading Specialist at the Dr. Joyanne D. Miller Elementary School. A certified Wilson Reading teacher, Casey's passion is helping struggling readers. She has been fortunate enough to work on a variety of teams in the school, some of which include: the 504 Committee, the Intervention and Referral Services team, School Leadership and the Curriculum Committee. She has experience with grant writing and the budgeting process.

Casey and her husband Rob moved to Linwood in 2009 and have two daughters, Ryann and Erin that attend Linwood schools. In her free time, Casey likes to travel, read, and be anywhere near the water!
